Treats, shoots and leaves

Spanning a 2,000-acre sweep of emerald Sri Lankan plantations, Ceylon Tea Trails is made up of five colonial-era bungalows; follow the road from one to the next, staying a night or two in the plush bedrooms of each. By day, you can pick tea alongside the skilled Tamil workers, while in the evenings, enjoy a soak in one of the infinity pools, before tucking into a meal cooked by your personal chef.

Stellar dining

Some two hours' drive from Lisbon, São Lourenço do Barrocal attracts global gastronomes, thanks to its farm-to-table philosophy, with a menu that includes slow-roasted veal, fresh tomatoes and fish from the local lake. After dinner, admire the spectacular night sky from your suite's balcony; the estate's remote location makes it perfect for stargazing.
